GIVING TIERNAN POINTERS.

Cass County Man Recommends a Line for the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado.

To the Kansas City Times:-

The marvelous growth of Kansas City and the country tributary to it is attracting the great capitalists of the country, and we near now in Cass, Henry and Bates counties much talk of the early building of the St. Louis, Kansas City and Colorado railroad, the main line extend ing from St. Louis west through Henry and Bates, with a branch from some point in Henry county through Cass and on to Kansas City. The country from Henry county to Kansas City is already supplied, and, indeed, more than supplied with railroad facilities, having the Kansas City and Chicago, a branch of the Gulf system, and Kansas City and Southern, or what is popularly known as the Baily road, now completed as far as East Lynn in Cass county.

What I desire to do in this article is to call the attention of General Tiernan and his chief engineer to some points in an article that recently appeared in the Butler Times, advocating the idea of this branch road leaving the main line at Butler, instead of Clinton or any other point in Henry county, and this article was not written by a citizen of Butes county. He says, running north from Butler, "striking the south boundary line of Cass county at or near the southeast corner of section 32, township 43 of range 32, running almost due north about fitteen miles, crossing south fork of Grand river one mile above the mouth of Owen's' creek and striking west side of middle fork of Grand river one mile east of Freeman: thence up middle fork of Grand river to the northwest corner of Cass county."

This is a route that would give a railroad to that unexcelled body of agricultural country lying between the Lexington and Southern (the Missouri Pacific system) on the east and the Gult railroad on the west, passing over a natural of, I think, easier grades than can be secured from any point in Henry county and traversing a country unsurpassed in ail that goes to cor statute a rich agricultural community. The same advantages of easy grade and fine country will apply in running the main line to Walnut in Bates county and starting the Kansas City branch from there, besides tapping the Walnut coal and the oil of northern Bates. The fine country through which the road would pass and its want of railroad tacilities, with its easy grades, are the points to which we desire to call the attention of General Tiernan and those interested with him in the construction of this branch road I am a citizen of Harrisonville, and, of course, would be glad to have this branch via this city, but at the same time, the fact remains that we are at present well supplied with railroads, and the interests of the contemplated railroad company and of the whole people of Cass county, especially those of the western portion of the county, would be better subserved by a line over the route indicated.
